MASS MEETING TO DISCUSS CIVIC CENTER CALLED

Eye Witness Writes His Mother Thrilling Story of Berkeley Fire

Our City comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

Civic Center Mass Meeting Should be Largely Attended.

THE announcement given in today's paper that the Civic Center committee of Community Service had been forced to action through pressure of other citizens is surely a sign of the times.

The suggested plan of turning the old High school plant into a Civic Center has been well received by the people. We have never been in accord with those who favored side-tracking the proposition until the sewer problem is definitely settled. We could never see any connection between the two. While recognizing the absolute necessity of sewers for the well being of our city we also recognize the need for a community play ground.

* * *

ALL the stranger visiting our city can do is walk the streets. With a civic center, especially one located as near the center as the high school grounds are, benches could be provided for those desiring to rest.

A square deal to the young people also demands that some provision be made to take care of their idle hours. Many restrictions have been placed on their activities and nothing given to take their place. If we are to keep our young people in Glendale something must be done.

* * *

THE settling of this matter will also have a bearing on the postoffice situation, for the idea to lease one of the school buildings to the government for a postoffice has been presented.

The business interests of Glendale could have no objections to the main postoffice being located there, and if branch offices were placed in the different sections of the city all the populace could be efficiently served.

* * *

SOME disposition of the old high school plant must be made before long. Business efficiency, if not public necessity, will demand it. No better time to settle this matter than the present.

The mass meeting called to consider this matter should be well attended, so that all sides to the question may be represented.

W. E. HEWITT CALLS CONFERENCE OF CHEST COMMITTEE

Under instructions received from the Chamber of Commerce directorate, W. E. Hewitt is summoning to a conference meeting at the Chamber of Commerce tonight at 7:30 all the members of the original Community Chest committee which has reported and been discharged, and representatives of all the civic and fraternal organizations, clubs, etc., in Glendale, to formulate plans for a permanent civic chest organization and the raising of a budget to cover all the philanthropic interests Glendale has been in the habit of supporting. The aim is to save time, labor and annoyance by concentrating this work in one drive so that there will not be continual separate calls, and so that all will be properly taken care of. It is hoped that every person to whom notice has been sent and all others interested in the formation of a community chest, will be present.

VIVID NARRATIVE OF BERKELEY BLAZE

Gerald Toll Writes Vividly of the Great Conflagration

Mrs. Charles H. Toll of this city is in receipt of an intensely interesting letter from her son Gerald, who is a student at the state university, Berkeley, describing the fire which so nearly reached the campus of that institution and in which he, in company with fellow students, did heroic work to stay the flames and save property.

He describes the sultry weather and high winds which preceded the blaze, the smoke with which the air was filled Monday morning and his hike Monday afternoon to the scene of the blaze. He writes:

"The fire was coming over the hills of North Berkeley near Cragmont, running before a 25 to 40-mile wind. There were comparatively few people there at the time. We who were there worked frantically with shovels and sacks but we couldn't do a thing. We managed to save a few houses well up on the hill, where things were not so thickly built. By the time a few houses had burned, whistles and sirens started blowing. All classes were dismissed and thousands of students came running up the hill. The worst of it was there was no water. At this same time Mills College was threatened; so was the Claremont hotel. I didn't see a single fireman or engine until the fire was way past control.

"All the fighters could do was to clean out houses, but the fire was advancing at such a rapid rate that the stuff could hardly be moved. What was carried away was mostly smashed beyond all use, and the rest was left to burn in the street. About a dozen outomobiles were burned in the streets.

"To make matters worse, things started to burn all around. The fire didn't advance from house to house, consecutively, but would skip sometimes two blocks at a time. The smoke was terrible and burning sticks and cinders were falling everywhere. All this time there was little or no water. It was rumored that someone had gone for dynamite, but no one knew when it would be here. The wind continued to blow with steady fury . Three blocks or so in front of the fire were women serving ice water, hot coffee and sandwiches to the men.

"The fire got within two blocks of the campus. The wind was still blowing. By this time there wasn't any water at all. The Phi Kaps, who were then just across the street directly in the path of the flames, were waging a gallant fight on their roof with but one tub full of water left. The whole north side of the house was smoking, the flames almost licking it. The fire engine had at last arived, but could do little or nothing. The fire had jumped to the block to the east of the Phi Kap house. It certainly looked as though the campus would go next.

"All this time the fire had been spreading west. It reached Shattuck avenue. It entered the business district and a few houses south of University avenue were on fire.

It was just at this critical moment the miracle happened. The wind changed and started to blow in the opposite direction. A natural backfire was formed. The water came on also and dynamite arrived on the scene. I fail to see what good dynamite or water would have done in the face of the wind, but it was certainly invaluable after the fire was no longer fanned by the wind. The efforts of the fire fighters became more effective and by 6:30 there was no more danger in the North Berkeley section. I went home across the campus, grabbed somehting to eat and set out for the Claremont section. The fire there was not so bad now that the wind had died down and by 2 in the morning it was finally out, so I went home and indulged in some much needed sleep. I was never so tired in all my life—quite a wreck, so to speak. I had been slightly burned in several places, and bruised about the arms from bumping into things while carrying furniture. One burn is right on the top of my head where a cinder fell on me. There is a spot about as big as a dollar where I have no hair left.

"Yesterday morning I got up very early and went down to the Student Union to help in relief work. I was in charge of registering burned out people as safe, and their new temporary or permanent addresses. I also had a general information bureau. I kept it up all day even missing a mid-term examination. By evening we had things pretty well straightened around and everybody had a place to sleep. Free eats were kept going in the Union all day for refugees and workers. The whole north side of the campus is just covered with household belongings and the Women's club rooms have been converted into a gigantic lost and found department. The last two days have been rather busy, don't you think?"

THE WEATHER

Southern California: Fair tonight and Tuesday; light westerly winds.

GLENDALE ELKS WILL COME HOME IN BLAZE OF GLORY

The first good news from the convention was that the Glendale Elks' band had captured first honors at the convention. A number of Elks' bands from prominent cities competed, but the local organization "hung it on" to the rest of the contending bodies.

Now comes the news that Arthur H. Dibbern, who lives at 512 East Lomita, and is past exalted ruler of the Elks' lodge of this city, was elected vice-president of the state organization. The other officers elected were Dr. Howard B. Kirkland, San Luis Obispo, president; Harry Hutchinson, Oakland, second vice-president; William Springer of Ontario, third vice-president; J. J. Foyer of Los Angeles, secretary; C. W. Haub of Sacramento, treasurer.

HERMAN NELSON ENTHUSIASTIC ON TRIP TO MEXICO

Says 'Tis a Wonderful Country in Every Respect

Herman Nelson, who is back on his job at the Pacific Southwest bank at Glendale and Broadway, says that the trip he has just made to Mexico as one of the representatives of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, was absolutely the most interesting and agreeable that he ever took, that it was fine from start to finish.

When asked how Mexico compared with his preconceived ideas, he said: "It was entirely different from what I expected to find. It is a wonderful country in every respect if it could be properly developed, but the majority of the people will have to be educated before conditions can be made what they should be. I understand that of its population of between 15 and 16 millions, only 20 percent can read and write. Of the balance, the majority have a vocabulary of not to exceed 500 words.

"Living conditions among the peons are as bad as any one could imagine. We saw all kinds of poverty. Instead of being a strong race they are a weak people, physically. It is clear to me that we have missionary work to do right at our back door in Mexico to lift the standard of living and conduct there."

Dr. Jessie Russell, who was also a Glendale representative, said she had not visited Mexico in 17 years but could see how progress had been retarded by the period of revolution that has intervened since she last saw the country. This was much more noticeable in the northern part than around Mexico City. In the north they seemed to have felt the reaction more keenly in business and morale. Recognition, she believes, is going to be a very good thing for both Mexico and the United States in a commercial way. From her talks with the ministers of finance and education she believes that the policy of the present administration is generally approved and that it will be continued under the next president whose election will take place in the near future. Under the constitution of Mexico the present incumbent cannot be a candidate to succeed himself.

MASS MEETING IS CALLED FOR CONSIDERATION OF CIVIC CENTER QUESTION

Agitation Directed Toward Securing the Old High School Site as Location of City Hall and Civic Center Leads to the Call

IT IS DEEMED LOGICAL PLACE FOR THEM

Decision Reached at Mass Meeting of Civic Center Committee Held Saturday Noon That Whole Matter Should Be Referred to People

On account of the pressure that has been brought to bear upon the Community Service committee on the civic center proposition from outside sources, that body has issued a call for a mass meeting to be held at the high school auditorium next Monday evening for the purpose of endeavoring to determine what shall be done in connection with the securing of the old high school site for civic center purposes.

The decision to call this mass meeting was reached at a meeting of the civic center committee, held at Jensen's Egyptian Village, Saturday noon.

Following is a short report of this meeting, which states its purpose and the action taken:

"Because of the agitation on the part of many organizations and individuals in regard to securing the High school grounds as a civic center, Alex Mitchell called the Civic Center committee together Saturday at Jensen's Egyptian Village. Members of the committee present were Alex Mitchell, chairman; L. H. Wilson, Chas. A. Stuart and Thos. D. Watson. Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, the other member of the committee, was absent on account of illness.

"Mr. Mitchell reported that many individuals had been asking why no action was being taken by the Civic Center committee in connection with this matter and were urging that something be done to find out the sentiment of the people on this question. All of the members were in favor of action at once and passed a resolution calling for a mass meeting at the High school on Monday evening, October 1. Mrs. Hutchinson voted in favor of this resolution when it was reported to her. At this meeting the various members of the committee will report their findings in regard to the Civic Center and then pass the topic over to the group present to take any action they see fit. The committee feels that then its duty will have been finished. All the people of Glendale are urged to attend this meeting and take part in the discussion."

The purchase of the High school ground for civic center purposes was first brought to the attention of the people of Glendale, several months ago. The discussion on this question resulted in the selection of a committee by Community Service to determine what action should be taken along this line. This committee consists of Alex Mitchell, chairman; Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, Thomas D. Watson, L. H. Wilson, Charles E. Stuart and Ernest E. Tucker, Community Service secretary in Glendale.

Suggestions were received from various sources that nothing be done in connection with the civic center matter until the sewer proposition had been disposed of. The committee was disposed to follow this advice and for several weeks did nothing in connection with the civic center matter. However, the various members of the committee report that so many inquiries have been received by them in connection with the matter, these being to the effect that some action looking toward the securing of the school grounds for this purpose should be taken, that the committee felt that it could not longer remain inactive.

At this mass meeting the committee expects an organization of citizens will be effected to carry on the work. The committee will feel that when this has been done its duties will have been fulfilled.

The civic center proposition is a live question in Glendale at this time. Whether or not its solution should be left until after the sewer matter has been settled remains with the citizens of Glendale.

While there are some who feel that nothing should be done until after the sewer question is settled there are many who believe that the settling of the sewer question will not, to any great extent, be affected by prior discussion and action in connection with the civic center proposition.

PRESIDENT GIVES VIEWS ON LIVE TOPICS

Expresses Himself on the World Affairs and Farm Situation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—In his first public speech since becoming president, Mr. Coolidge today revealed his position upon two important topics—international affairs and farmer relief.

Speaking at the opening session of the American Red Cross, the president said:

That the need of civilization is for an idealism that "does not seek to reform merely by an act of legislation thinking that is can unload its burden on the government and be relieved from further effort."

Mr. Coolidge declared that the world is coming more and more to rely on moral force and less on physical.

But ideals of human brotherhood and service "are idle dreams" unless they can be translated to practical action," he said. "It is necessary on the one hand to avoid the illusions of the visionaries and on the other hand, the indifference of the selfish.

"Each individual and each nation owe their first duty to themselves."

His reference to those who would remedy conditions by an act of legislation and thus escape further personal responsibility was taken as a reference to those who are urging him to turn over to congress the farmers' problems for settlement.

"Each individual and each nation," he repeated, "must work out their own destiny."

CHANGES MADE IN C. OF C. PROGRAM

A few changes have been made in the program for the entertainment which is being given Tuesday night in the High School auditorium by the Chamber of Commerce under the auspices of Community Service.

Community singing will be led by J. Arthur Myers, addresses will be made as planned by Mayor Robinson, Herman Nelson, Peter Ferry and Dr. Jessie Russell, telling of the reception the Chamber representatives were given in Mexico, the excursion and its personnel, what Mexico has and what she needs. Charles Guthrie will tell of his experiences on the west coast of Mexico and Viola Yorba will sing "L Paloma" in Spanish.

Royal Arch Degree Conferred on Many

The Masonic ceremonial in Sycamore Canyon, this city, Saturday afternoon when the Royal Arch degree was conferred in the open "In God's own temple" upon five candidates from the San Gabriel Chapter at Alhambra, was a brilliantly successful affair.

Representatives by the hundreds were present from chapters throughout the district to witness the ceremony under such unusual circumstances, Glendale being conspicuously represented by Past Grand High Priest Mattison B. Jones.

Following the conferring of the degree by Deputy Grand Lecturer Andrus L. Cavanagh, of the 17th District, a barbecue was enjoyed, which was the more delicious because of the good appetites of the feasters who had many of them come long distances to participate in the event.

THANKS GIVEN BY RED CROSS FOR FUND AID

"The officers of the Glendale Red Cross chapter extend thanks to all who assisted in any way in raising Glendale's quota for the Japanese relief fund. To the local newspapers who promptly and constantly gave generous publicity to the great need of the stricken people across the water and recorded the progress made from day to day in the matter of collections. To all the banks for their kindness in giving space for tables where donations were made; to all persons who solicited contributions; to all persons who gave, whether the amount was large or small; to the churches for their support; to the chamber of commerce committee and to the theaters for their courtesy and kindness. As the president of the United States designated the Red Coss to receive and transmit these funds we are glad to have had a small part in this great work.

TWO AMERICAN ARMY AVIATORS KILLED SUNDAY

BRUSSELS, Sept. 24.—American Lieutenants Olmstead and Choptaw, pilot and second pilot of the United States army balloon S-6, which started with thirteen others in the Gordon-Bennett cup race under extraordinarily bad weather conditions Sunday, were killed when their craft fell at Nilesteroode, Holland, during the night. The S-6 was struck by lightning and fell in flames.

Two Swiss balloonists were burned to death when their balloon, the Geneva, caught fire over Moll and a Spanish pilot, Peneranda, was killed when lightning struck his balloon, the Polar, at Heyst.

All the American entries were eliminated early in the classic.

Lieutenants Olmstead and Chopstaw who were killed had a narrow escape at the start of the race. As their balloon was taking off the high wind drove it into the Ville De Brusseles, ripping the netting from the latter's gas bag and damaging it so that it was necessary to empty it of gas.

The army balloon got away, however, amid angry yells from Belgian spectators.

Thirteen balloons in all succeeded in getting into the air.

A southwest gale drove the starters towards northern Germany, or the Scandinavian countries.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.— The two American army balloonists killed in the destruction of the army balloon S-6 in Holland were experienced fliers, army air service officials said today.

Lieutenant Robert S. Olmstead, a native of Sheldon, Vermont, was 37 years of age and was attached to the army air service depot at Middletown, Pa.

Lieutenant John W. Choptaw, 34, was a native of Worthington, Indiana, and was stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ills. He leaves a wife and two children.

FEDERAL TAXES NOT TO BE CUT AT NEXT SESSION

President Gives Reasons Therefor in Frank Statement

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Foreseeing inability to reduce federal taxaton at the coming session of congress, the Coolidge administration is fortifying itself with a defense and a reason.

Responsibility for the weight of the tax burden will be laid at the door of state, county and municipal authorities. The federal government, the country will be told, imposes far less, in proportion to the total taxation and to the services required of it than local governments.

Taking a leaf out of Mr. Harding's book, President Coolidge intends to stress this matter of local taxation. It may come up at his forthcoming conference with the governors.

Figures compiled by the census bureau will be used to show how tremendously the tax spending of local governments has increased during a period when the federal government in response to clamor, was doing its utmost to keep expenditures down.

Some high administration officials expect it will be possible to reduce federal taxes. They point to a handsome treasury surplus, increased revenues due in a measure to prosperous conditions and to continuation of the government's economy program. But with a bonus bill almost certain to be passed and with new needs for next year, many other officials do not see how any appreciable tax cut can come.

Even if taxes are reduced, the country will be told the real relief from taxation within the next few years must come, if at all, through reduction of local levies.

The census bureau's figures show startling increases in state, county and municipal expenditures in the last decade. In some places there has been a veritable orgy of tax spending. At the same time federal taxes were soaring because of the war and they have not and will not come down to peace time levels for many years, if ever.

SQUADRON CHIEF TAKES ALL BLAME FOR NAVY WRECK

[By Associated Press]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 24.—Captain Edward H. Watson, commander-in-chief of the destroyer squadron wrecked off Honda, Calif., September 8, told the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster here today that he himself made the decision to change course to the eastward at 9 o'clock on the night of the wreck, a decision which hurled seven destroyers to destruction.

Captain Watson said that he made the decision at 8:25 p. m. and at that time instructed Lieutenant Commander Donald T. Hunter, commanding officer of the Delphy, leading the squadron, to order the eastward turn at 9 o'clock, when it was estimated the ships were safely south of Point Arguello, in position to swing into the Santa Barbara channel.

RED CROSS FUND NOW $3,457.54

This closes the special drive and in appreciation of the response made by Glendale an open letter has been given to the Glendale Press for publication.

VIVID RECITAL BY EYE WITNESS OF JAPAN'S TRAGEDY

Elder F. C. Gilbert Tells Story to 3000 Persons Sunday

By W. L. TAYLOR

F. C. Gilbert, representative of the general conference of the Seventh Day Adventist church, who has just returned from a nine months' tour of the Orient, and who was in the harbor at Yokohoma when the earthquake came and wrought such havoc, gave a thrilling address yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the new Glendale sanitarium park to an audience estimated at more than three thousand people. For an hour and a half Elder Gilbert gave a most thrilling, vivid picture, detailing the terrible calamity and the suffering which followed.

The address was delivered out in the open, at a point just below the new sanitarium, which is an ideal spot for an amphitheater, and where improvised seats and a platform had been erected to accommodate the large crowd. Invitations had been extended to the members of the various churches to attend and the crowd was the largest seen at any gathering of the kind here for many years. Elder Gilbert said:

"I certainly am glad and esteem it a privilege to be here at this hour, and not only am I grateful to God for the preservation of life but so wonderfully thankful that through His kindness and mercy I was allowed to pass through the experiences that I did and am here today to tell you the story.

I cannot find language to fit the occasion that we met with three weeks ago yesterday, in the cities of Yokomoma and Tokio and the territory surrounding them for about forty miles.

"A refugee standing by my side on the Empress of Australia, when word came to us that the large town of Kamakura, a very prominent place not far from Tokio, was gone and had become practically a burning mass of a volcano, and when the man told him, said he, Kamakura gone? Then said he, everything is gone!

"Three weeks ago yesterday the first day of September, was one of the most delightful and beautiful mornings I ever saw. It was a cloudless, beautiful, delightful morning. Several days before the heat had been very oppressive and very intensive for Japan. And in the night Friday night we had a shower and it cooled the atmosphere and it did seem so pleasant and delightful. I came from Shanghai on August 27, on that great leviathan, the Empress of Australia. I was sitting in my room reading on Saturday, Sept. 1, just about noon when all of a sudden—talk about sensation! I thought inasmuch as I had heard the second gong go off that the engineer got excited, for it seemed to me that the engines were pumping terribly. That great, mammoth ship jerked and jolted and seemed to kick.

"Just then the dor to my cabin opened and the Chinese boy came in and I said, 'Boy, what's the matter?' He said, 'Mister, quick, quick, I must close the port hole.' And just as I looked up, why, the sky had become dark, sort of grey. He said, 'Mister, go upstairs, quick, quick,' and I hurried upstairs as fast as I could. I saw a sight I hope the good Lord, if it be His will, will deliver me from ever seeing again. The great customs house of Yokohama, all the buildings and offices in connection therewith and the great wharf and iron barge connected with it had all gone down. The end of the wharf was all down under the water. The large buildings on the wharf—mammoth ones—with reinforced concrete, several of them, down they went! To my right was a building of reinforced concrete in the process of construction. Down it went more than half way. The large gang planks on which men, women and children were passing to and from the ship were turned over down in the water, and everywhere they could be seen clinging to rafts and looking to somebody to come and help them, while scores and hundreds of them were running and yelling and shouting.

"The air had become gray and shortly it became dark and cloudy, and our great leviathan steamship had become separated from the wharf. It was between 25 and 30 feet. Many of the craft in the harbor, some barges, launches and tugs, probably of 500, 1000 or 1500 tons, took fire, and the masters of them had abandoned them to the mercy of the wind and the wave.

"Then we began to look around. Everything on shore seemed to be united in burning. One great mass of fire! one great volume! A lot of the people on board got so afraid. Oh, I suppose scores, if not hundreds of them went and got life-savers for they did not know any minute what might happen to them. A lot of the barges had got in between what was left of the wharf and us, and it took fire. For hours and hours and hours the pumps of the Empress of Australia pumped 320 gallons of water every sixty seconds and tried to quell some of those fires.

"Then they came on, hundreds and hundreds of them and told us the situation on shore, how the men and women got out of the mammoth burning buildings.

"The water mains broke and that helped to make rivers and ponds and canals and mud holes, so what the earthquake did not do the fire did, and what the earthquake and fire did not do the water did. The poor people were seen floating down the canals and rivers by the scores and by the hundreds. Before the fire and earthquake Yokohama had a population of between four and five hundred thousand, almost as large as San Francisco. When I left there five days later, the next Thursday, there were not three buildings standing in the city of Yokohama, and I haven't any idea that there were 50,000 left in the city and its suburban territory. Many people who came across from Tokio said again and again that they loked away in the country but could not see any houses. Everything was down flat.

"There were great fissures in the ground, some of which were large enough, they said, they could look down 15 or 20 feet in the ground. Some of the cemeteries had the large tombstones turned over and some of the tombs were opened up.

"Every once in a while we would hear another explosion. Gasoline tanks and gas tanks, tank after tank of some description which went off with the result that there were tons and tons of oil distributed over hundreds and hundreds of acres of water so that the water became one great layer of oil.

"How sad I felt, for men and women, one after another, who a little while before were worth their millions, and now had not even a yen to their name, but they thanked God they could get out with even a nightshirt or a pair of pajamas.

"The next day word went around that the Empress of Canada was coming. Some of us tried to get away on that ship. A little later the President Jefferson came in so I got my baggage all ready and something just seemed to say to me to just keep easy and I felt that all through the experiences God's providence seemed so leading that I would keep easy. Who should I see the next day but two of our brethren from the compound in Japan, and these two young men told me of conditions in Ogikibo.

"While the quake hit Yokohama so terribly Tokio was not damaged so much by earthquake, but the fires and tidal wave did the mischief in Tokio. Three-fourths of the houses in Tokio are empty. Where are the people? The fires burned like the crescent of the moon and I suppose there were hundreds if not thousands of the poor people who were roasted that way. Most of the buildings in Tokio are down either by the quake or by the fire. Of course, food was high. Japan did all she could to bring in foodstuffs as fast as possible.

All that England could do she did; all that America could do she did, and the work of rescue went on and on."

"Scientists claimed that certain cities in Japan would never be touched by an earthquake, but today one of these same cities has been obliterated, and although Yokohama is considered the earthquake center of the world, no spot is immune from God when He decides to take a hand in our affairs. The Bible plainly teaches that there will be earthquakes in divers places and we may expect them anywhere.

"Men and women, wild eyed and temporarily insane, ran hither and thither at Yokohama, and they fully believed the end of the world had come.

"The only safe place was in the water and thousands of people stood for two days and nights in the bay with water up to their necks, and so great was the heat upon their heads that some became insane. For two days the sun was a blaze of fire and words are inadequate to picture the calamity that befell Japan."

At the close of Evangelist Gilbert's address, Elder Parmale announced that a collection would be taken to supplant the Red Cross quota and $210 was ralized from the open collection. This is the first opportunity California has had to hear an eye-witness give in detail the facts of the greatest catastrophe that has befell the world in hundreds of years.

Like most men and women who have found the Packard their logical choice you, too, will serve your own best interest if you study carefully the Single-Six in relation to economical buying.

You will learn from the reports of Single-Six owners that you can expect 16 to 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline and 20,000 miles to a set of tires.

You will find that they have learned there is so high a re-sale value, such small repair bills and so little depreciation, that good business judgment necessarily dictates the Single-Six as the one choice.

Dr. Funk's Theme Is "The Value of a Man"

A large audience greeted Dr. Funk on his return from the annual synodical meeting at San Francisco. In discussing the subject, "The Value of a Man," Dr. Funk declared that extravagance and luxury had undermined the ideals of many young men. The general estimate of a man's value is based upon the size of his salary; he is measured in terms of dollars and cents.

Wm. A. Snell and Miss Ruby Orcutt Wedded August 21st

The many friends of Miss Ruby Orcutt and William A. Snell were surprised to learn on Saturday of their marriage, which took place August 21 at San Diego, Rev. Paul Pritchard officiating.

The young couple stole a march on their relatives and friends, when they motored to San Diego from La Jolla, where Mrs. Orcutt and Miss Ruby had been spending the summer, and were quietly married. On returning to LaJolla, they stopped at Torrey Pines Inn for dinner. Mrs. Snell is the daughter of Mrs. Marie Orcutt of Lamanda Park and is a popular member of the younger set in both Pasadena and Glendale. Mr. Snell is the son of Mrs. Mary M. Snell of 116 East Eulalia. He attended high school in Glendale and has a host of friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Snell motored to Glendale from San Diego to spend the week-end. They were the guests of Mr. Snell's mother. They expect to make their permanent home in Glendale, after January 1. Until that time, they will remain in San Diego.

On Saturday evening Mr. Slyde Bobson of Los Angeles was the guest at the Snell home, 116 East Eulalia.

CHORAL SOCIETY COMMITTEE MEETS TONIGHT

The committee appointed to organize a choral society, of which Mrs. Alexander Mitchell is chairman, has been called to meet this evening at 7:30 at the Chamber of Commerce to make plans for such a society which will function under the auspices of Community Service. All members of the committee and persons interested are urged to be present at the hour named.

When blankets are being washed remember that the rinsing water must be soapy in order to make the blankets light and fluffy. Another point to be remembered is that all the waters in which the blankets are washed should be of the same temperature.

HENRY CANTOR'S CONCERT PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

Large Audience Was Most Generous With Applause and Encores

A real treat was given the music lovers of Glendale in the concert given by Henry Cantor under the auspices of the Tuesday Afternoon club at its clubhouse Saturday evening. It was a representative and appreciative audience which inspired Mr. Cantor and the artists associated with him to be generous with encores. Many musicians were present from Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena and other cities.

He was assisted by Madame Jadwiga Zebrowska and Miss Iva Hanners, soprano; by Harry Nielsen who served as his accompanist, by Madame Romanowska, who was the accompanist of the ladies mentioned, and by Mr. Craig, who contributed cello numbers.

The group with which Mr. Cantor opened the concert proved him at his best and prepared the audience for an evening of enjoyment. "L' Alba Separa Dalla Lombra" (D' AnnunzioTosti) called forth special applause. No less pleasing were the four numbers with which he closed the program, the encore he gave in response to recall, "Absence," meeting with warm applause.

Mr. Nielsen was revealed as a delightful pianist and his solo additions to the program drew sincere tributes of admiration to which he responded graciously but briefly.

The sopranos also found favor and were recalled by spontaneous applause more than once. Their voices are not at all alike but each had its own charm and appeal.

Of great interest were the dramatic operatic selections in which action helped to interpret the theme. The first of these "Canio's Lament" (Leon Carvallo) was sung by Mr. Cantor in solo and attired in a beautiful clown's costume of white satin. The other two scenes were in duet with Madame Zebrowska and Miss Hanners.

On account of the Japanese earthquake the Oriental tour for which Mr. Cantor and Mr. Nielsen were booked, has been postponed until January. Meanwhile they will fill engagements in Southern California.

MORE THAN 300 AT MRS. LILLIAN BALLAGH'S PARTY

The response of guests invited to the harvest moon garden party of Mrs. Lillian Ballagh was a tribute to her reputation as a hostess. When the weather became uncertain she feared many would not have the courage to come but her doubts proved wholly unjustified. Not less than 300 friends, most of them from Los Angeles and Hollywood accepted her hospitality and greeted the special guest, Dr. I. C. Gary, at the head of the People's Hospital of Chicago, who has been making a short visit to Southern California and is returning to the Windy City today.

In appreciation of so cordial a reception the doctor contributed to the program recitations expressing the humor, philosophy and sentiment for which he is famous, all of which were much enjoyed.

Other numbers on the program were furnished by talented young women, one of them Julia Pelley of Glendale, who danced "The Horn of Plenty," peculiarly appropriate for a harvest festival. Songs and dances by Helen McDade were of the Spanish type. The third of the quartet, Helen Johnston, was a professional Los Angeles dancer, and the fourth, Elsie Manion, contributed violin solo numbers.

The garden was very beautiful in ts harvest decorations of corn flowers, pumpkins, etc., and its festoons of grapes.

John Kelley, Charles Keen and Fred Poore were masters of ceremony, and the hostess was assisted in reeciving by Mrs. Frankie Webb, Mrs. Roy Ballagh, Mrs. Courtney Ballagh, Mrs. Charles Sumner Kent, Mrs. Charles Burns, Mrs. Herbert Ohler, Mrs. Spencer Kelley, and Miss Ruth Shaffner.

GLEN EYRIE FOLK GIVE JOLLY PARTY SATURDAY NIGHT

Program and Banquet Feature Eastern Star Event

Glen Eyrie chapter spared no effort to make the party it gave for matrons and patrons of O. E. S. chapters of Southern California on Saturday evening at Masonic temple, a success and it proved one of the jolliest affairs ever given under that roof.

In the reeciving line were chapter officers—Mildred Lyon, worthy matron; Harry Redd, worthy patron; Jennie Phillips, associate matron; Mae Warrick, conductress; Mrs. H. A. McPherson, associate conductress; Mrs. Margaret Tennant, chaplain; Alice Carvel, treasurer; Mrs. Nell Holbrook, secretary; Mrs. Martha Dibbern, marshal; Mrs. Valencia Watson, Mrs. Bertha Wyvell, Mrs. Dolly Case, Mrs. Ella Hickman, Mrs. Irene Whitaker, points of the star; Mrs. Anna Humphrey Clark, warder; Matthew Dewar, sentinel; W. W. Worley, a past patron, master of ceremonies.

Miss Mildred Lyon, head of the chapter was responsible for the general arrangements including the decoration with dahlias which made the chapter room and banquet nall gay with color.

Of the refreshment committee Mrs. Orma Naudain, past matron, was chairman and was assisted by Mrs. W. W. Worley, Mrs. Frank Beckett, Miss Doris Thomas, Miss May Cornwell, Mrs. Mae Warrick and Mrs. Rudolph.

After the assemblage had been called to order in the chapter hall, guests were greeted by Worthy Matron Lyon who had a series of gracious speeches, first for the guests in general, then the grand officers, the matrons, patrons and trailers. On entering the hall, each visiting matron and patron had received a gift, the patrons dusters of bright colored wool, the matrons memo books.

William Sbowden, worthy patron of Southgate chapter, responded for patrons guests, and Daisy Brown, worthy matron of Garvanza chapter and also president of the Patrons' association, spoke for the matrons of Southern California.

The officers of the hostess chapter were dressed in white and wore yellow badges. After discharging their duties in the receiving line at the door, they marched into the hall in a body.

Forty worthy matrons and almost as many worthy patrons were present from all parts of Southern California, and three grand officers were special guests, viz: Irene Trunick Clark, Deputy Grand Matron and past matron of the Highland Park chapter; Henrietta Hoffman of Santa Monica chapter, Grand Adah of California; John Alcorn, past grand treasurer of Colorado.

After the speeches and introductions a short program was given which included a whistling solo by Helen Paine, and original songs, dances, and saxaphone solos by Jackie Barton accompanied by Pansy Cort. This having been completed the company marched to the banquet hall and were seated at the flower decked tables where jack-o'lanterns were in evidence and where the guests of the evening found their places marked by special favors of bonbon baskets in the shape of hats for the patrons, toy trunks for the matrons as a hint of their needs next month when they attend the annual convention; and for the trailers and home-folk little jack-o'lanterns.

When the banquet came to an end there was another adjournment to the chapter hall for more speeches and entertainment and then a grand march to the banquet room from which the tables had been removed that the rest of the evening might be devoted to dancing. Balloons, crickets and other favors were dispensed which induced lively scrambles and plenty of noise and merriment, the excellent 4-piece Stanley orchestra of Pasadena furnishing the music for the dancing.

Mrs. A. H. Koverman of 915 Lomita avenue, accompanied by Mrs. Mary Corney of Louisville, Ky., spent Friday in Ocean Park.

REVOLUTION IN EUROPE

Europe is now the scene of several national episodes that may be classed as revolutions. They are precipitated by a class not inclined to revolt, but that, in very self defense, had to seize power from the hands of those eager to crush them. Ordinarily the victims of revolution are the middle classes. In Russia, for example, such classes have been exterminated with the same cruel certainty that the blood of royalty was shed. In Italy a movement was observed as modeled on a similar plan and likely to have similar effect. To preserve life and liberty, the middle classes virtually took over the government there. Heavy was the restraining hand they laid on the turbulent. The communist, even if not converted from the error of his ways, was forced to abandon them. He was overcome by fear. He perceived that under Mussolini a power had arisen against which it was futile for him to oppose his puny rancor. He subsided, and so saved his skin. Kingship became a fiction in Italy, as the plan of the communist changed to a shattered dream.

Later, with a leader distinctly imitating the methods of the Italian dictator, Spain took its place under a dictatorship. The monarch was not deposed. He has still his title, his uniform and his palace. He is treated with utmost courtesy. All his kingship lacks is authority. The reasons for the revolution in Spain were those that had brought Mussolini into power in Italy. The red flag was becoming the emblem of an element growing more violent and dangerous. Human experience has shown that, clothed with power, the lowest social stratum produces a most hateful tyranny. Its arrogance spares nothing. The people of Spain realized their danger, and so, under a military director, at his mandate, they took matters into their own hands. These were the middle class people, not the habitual malcontents. They saw ruin for all their kind unless the encroaching communism could be checked, and they checked it.

Now Bulgaria appears to have a revolution but along somewhat different lines. It has not been brought about by adroit diplomacy, but from the start has been marked by fighting. The basic reason however, is precisely that which inspired Italy and then Spain. The red flag, and all that emblem implies, is the explanation in Bulgaria as elsewhere. The people know that it must be torn down, and its principles defeated, if orderly government, for the benefit of the middle classes, and the only hope of these classes, is to abide.

THE WAR ON CRIME

Los Angeles is making a war on crime. Able men who have devoted themselves to the study of crimonology have given their services. Doubtless something is being accomplished, but the fruits of the movement are not ready to be introduced in evidence. They have not developed to visibility. It may be assumed that they are now in the form of seeds, in fertile soil, and beginning to sprout.

In a recent issue of a paper of that city, the crime commission was praised for "stopping violence." On the same page was the record of two new local murders, one of the crimes having been followed by suicide. On other pages were follow-up stories detailing similar crimes that had occurred within forty-eight of the fresher ones. If the crime commission has succeeded in "stopping violence" the mind shudders at the thought of what conditions would have been had no check been placed upon the general tendency towards assassination.

Discussion by the criminologists, however, is likely to be of good effect ultimately. It brings out conditions that are dangerous to society, and of which society is mostly unaware. Therefore it neglects to protect itself. There are individuals of low mentality upon whom no restraint is placed, and for whose improvement nothing is done. Unfit to be at large, they go about as they please. Emphatically unfit to marry, they do marry and the moron tribes increase. Most criminals are of low order mentally. If when young, their energies had been directed into a different channel, while no particular achievement could have been expected of them, at least they might have avoided criminal careers.

As the scientific scholars attend to the psychoanalytic part of the reform movement, the duty of the police is, as ever, to catch the offender. The time may come for congratulations upon the stopping of violence, but announcement that such time has arrived surely must be regarded as premature.

SIGNIFICANT PREFERENCES

Manuel Quezon, leader of the demand for independence of the Philippines, or at least the most vocal among the agitators, said recently: "I repeat now that the Filipinos prefer a government run like hell to a government run by Americans."

Quezon is not discreet. Were he and his associates to formulate a demand for independence, stating the reason back of it, and setting forth the capacity of the natives as equal to the task, then they would be entitled to respectful hearing. When they confine their efforts to stirring up discord and shouting abuse, they destroy their own case.

The conditions in no way parallel or suggest those prevailing when the American colonies broke away from England. The colonists had advanced by their own endeavors. They had not been helped but hindered by the mother country. The rights they had demanded clearly were being wrongfully withheld. They had demonstrated sufficient strength of character and unity of purpose to demonstrate their fitness for self-government.

But for the United States, the Philippines would have been in a state of savagery now, or in possession of another power, perhaps less gentle and liberal. Or it would have been the scene of social chaos. This country took it from Spain, and having taken it, paid a price in gold, although under none but moral obligations to do so. Since then it has devoted millions to schools, to the creation of a financial system, to the training of the natives to be responsible and useful men. More and more it has clothed the natives with authority, hoping they would show themselves worthy of it. But in many instances the power granted them has been abused, and the leaders it had been thought might be raised to some perception of the duties of statesmanship, have turned out to be scheming politicians with no higher object than personal gain.

The promise of independence was given in the beginning; given in good faith, to which this government proposes to adhere. When the natives have been welded into a compact group, and have reached a point of intelligence and culture at which they cannot be controlled by a handful of noisy but ill-advised and ignobly-minded schemers, doubtless independence will be extended gladly. It cannot be extended until the proper time has come, and the attitude of Quezon and his type is holding back that day; a day as welcome to the people of the United States as to those of the islands.

A woman bought a costly coffin for herself the other day. She had no prospect of early need for the receptacle, but soon had been laid away in it. The purchase of a coffin for personal use, before needed, might be regarded generally as a poor way to lock up capital.

The founding of a great Chautaqua institution above the palisades near Santa Monica would be a fine educational movement. The project has been under consideration for some time. It has now reached the stage at which it is regarded as a financial certainty.

"HE TRAVELS FASTEST"

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

A barber who knows more about whiskers than he does about history is discovered as a result of having told his wife that he wanted to "lead his own life."

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

He added that a man "could not get anywhere with a wife and family on his neck."

The only trouble with the able barber's point of view is that it happens not to be true.

With a handful of exceptions all the men who ever did get anywhere made the journey accompanied by the encouragement and love of a wife and children. In case the barber doubts this he might bone up on history for a bit.

A reporter, evidently young and fed up on Kipling began his account of the divorce proceedings by quoting:

"Down to Gehenna or up to the throne
He travels fastest who travels alone."

Granted, but what is the use of traveling fast if one is going nowhere?

Was it not G. K. Chesterton who complained that he saw no point in going from one uninteresting place to another uninteresting place at 60 miles an hour?

It took a genius to see so palpable a fact.

The man who wants to discard his family to "get somewhere" is likely to want to get nowhere except to the house of some idler who offers amusement in the place of happiness.

All of the people who are traveling to any place that is worthwhile go in pairs as the animals went into the ark.

Lieutenant Robert Perry took his wife with him on many of his polar expeditions and her presence and companionship comforted and sustained him through the long arctic nights.

Martin Johnson when he went to Central Africa to make moving pictures of wild beasts in their haunts took his wife. Ask him if he would have left her behind.

Roy Chapman Andrews, heading the third Asiatic expedition into Mongolia, is accompanied by his wife, and boasts of it.

"He travels fastest who travels alone——" may be. But he travels best who takes with him the woman of his heart and the honor of his soul.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

For three years I have avoided visiting Smithville. I did my business—such as I did—by mail, telephone or telegraph. I feared the permanent fly. When I knew Smithville he hovered, blackish purple, fat, abominable, between the smeared mustard pot and the window, over the mussy tablecloth of the dining room in the Eagle House. He became a symbol of the Eagle House, Smithville, and the tobacco-chewing, slack-panted, loose-eyed inhabitants thereof.

"You run a rotten hotel, Mr. Eagle," I said once, in a burst of frenzied candor.

Mr. Eagle was a jolly, fat, kindly man. He took no offense.

"It's a rotten town," said he.

But Smithville's demands upon my attention have been increasing lately, and I revisited it this week. It was different and better. More pep, more hustle, less listless propping up of blank walls. The Eagle House has become The Phoenix. It glowed with cleanliness and comfort. Old Hank Eagle, Prop., was gone. The new proprietor did less handshaking and more work.

"The town would pay him to stay if he wanted to go," said its business men.

Old Hank Eagle has "played down" to what he thought was the town level. He did not believe it would pay to offer the town a better hotel. Instead of doing his best he deliberately did his mediocre. The town was stamped by the Eagle House. No one came near it except when forced by dire necessity. The business men suffered through lack of sufficient contact with a wider world.

"I determined to create business," said the new proprietor, "when old Hank was sold out. There is only one way. That is, to offer people something so good they cannot afford to neglect it."

The town is better in every way through this one man's efforts. Yet Hank had the same chance. He failed because he did not realize that the popular appetite for something better is illimitable. The man who despises his neighbor or his town always fails. Opportunity beckons each of us constantly. Too many of us "play down" instead of "playing up."

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

Stand up.
Hold your head high.
You are one of the Lord's children.
Endowed with strength.
Intelligence.
Capacity.

* * *

If you undermine strength.
If you prostitute intelligence.
If you lessen capacity.
If you do any of these things you cannot stand up straight.
You cannot hold your head high.
You cannot look upon the world and your neighbors with a clear and unwinking eye.

* * *

So when your head is not held high.
When your vision is not sure but uncertain and fearful.
When your spirit sags.
When you do not rise to face the world with cheer and energy and a desire to do your share of the world's work, something is the matter.

* * *

And the matter is not with the world.
The matter is with you.
For remember that old saying of Marcus Aurelius:
"NO MAN CAN FIX ON ME WHAT IS UGLY."
A good thing to keep in your mind.

* * *

You may have a physical ailment.
And in that case intelligent treatment and care will help you.
Or you may have a moral ailment.
In which case you must help yourself.

No outside influence can restore without your own acknowledgment and aid and resolve.

* * *

So test yourself.
Do you hold your head high?
Whether you are butcher or baker or teacher or preacher or banker or lawyer or doctor.
It matters not which.
Do you look on the world with a clear eye?
And are you serene and unafraid?

* * *

Those are the tests.
It is not position or place or money or possessions.
It is spirit that counts.
And how is yours?
That is a fair question.
And an important one for you.
For upon the honest answer depends your happiness.
Your usefulness.
Your place in the world.
Your self-respect.

* * *

Try yourself.
Drive the nail home with a clear and honest blow.
Swing the sledge with determination and strength.
Do the task with willingness and gladness.
And feel that you are a real man or woman doing a real work in a real world.

* * *

Courageous.
Clear eyed.
Unafraid.
Willing.
With your head high.
One of the Lord's children.
To whom nothing of happiness and gladness will be denied.
If you choose to reach out and take the treasure of life offered to you.

The Road—By Clinton Schollard in Munsey's

Into the distance drear and dim
Goes the road, and I go too,
On to the far horizon's rim,
Ever and ever away from you.

Yet howsoever wide we part,
Dawn or dusk, my fond and true,
Ever and ever my constant heart
Backward fares on the road to you!

MY WIVES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

NOT that I have a plurality of wives. Just to get myself accurately placed I will confess that I have had but one, who is still very efficiently on the job.

But in talking with Mr. Ku Hung-ming, the venerable philosopher of Peking, I became much interested, in his defense of polygamy and concubinage. He certainly had some new and curious arguments to advance in favor of these time-honored institutions.

One point he made was that it was a good thing for a man to have one or more assistants to his wife, because, he said, they were useful as "eye-rests." In fact, I think he said the Chinese name for concubine is "eye-rest." And, come to think of it, one does need a lady occasionally that rests the eye considerably. This suggests also that if one is making a collection of wives for restful purposes he might want to pick out one or two deaf and dumb ones as "ear-rests."

But, seriously speaking, should not a gentleman have several wives? Is not the wife business entirely too complicated and above the powers of any one woman?

In the first place, it seems to me, if I were a young man and starting a collection, I would want to pick out first of all three or four business ladies, say department store managers, traveling sales ladies or expert bookkeepers, whose duty it would be, and privilege, to skirmish around and make a living for the bunch, thus relieving me, their lord and master, of the necessity of doing any work.

Preferably I would have one of these working wives keep a millinery store. While she was employed in the establishment I could sit out in front under the cool awning, smoke my cigar and discuss politics with the judge and the preacher, occasionally going down to the post office for mail, when I needed exercise.

Another wife would have charge of social matters. She could do the calling, go to receptions and teas and bridge parties, and chat with visitors when they dropped in. She would have nothing else to do and could devote all her attention to this. It is pretty hard on a woman to have to take her hands out of the dough and come into the parlor and attend to company.

Another wife would look after the cooking. She would see that there was always plenty of doughnuts in the jar and apple pies on the pantry shelf. Not being bothered with parlor work, she could study cookery assiduously and bring the food level of the family up to fascinating pitch.

Another wife, preferably a stout one, could do the washing and ironing. As it is, laundrymen and hired wash women are expensive and lots of trouble. It seems much more rational to have a wife do all of this just for her board and keep.

Another wife would look after the highbrow matters. She could entertain me with literary conversation, read for me the poetry that bores me, and otherwise keep me posted in all things intellectual.

It might also be well to have a sort of cabaret or flapper wife whom I could occasionally take to frolics, where the wash woman wife would be out of place and the intellectual wife would really not care to go.

I might say that I mentioned this idea of mine to my real wife, and she asked me how it would do for a woman to have several husbands?

Isn't that just like a woman? Of course, it would never do for a woman to have more than one husband. This is a man's world. A woman should find her pleasure in sacrificing herself.

At least, so says Mr. Ku Hung-ming.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

BELITTLING BREVITY

[Washington Post]

The zeal of a Chicago university scholar for modernity and brevity has led him to offer an abbreviated rendering of the Lord's prayer. This variation is labeled "up to date." Waiving that point, in matters of literature and of reverence, "down" might be a more fitting antecedent of "to date" than "up," the reader of the abbreviation is moved to ask: Why?

Christians for nearly two thousand years have been praying the prayer as handed down in the Testament. So why change it? Has worship become so pressed for time that it can not spare the One to whom it appeals a word of adoration? If so, why not imitate the inventive sleepy-head who wrote out the prayer, pasted it on the head of his bed and said nightly, "Lord, them's my sentiments"?

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

There are a lot of people who are glad that the duties of governing Oklahoma do not devolve upon them just now. The executive of that state appears to be worse off than if stationed between the devil and the deep blue sea, a position assumed to be the climax of discomfort. The devil has him and the sea engulfs him.

The problem the gentleman has engaged to solve is one concerning which no verdict may be formulated at a distance. He says a notorious secret order has usurped authority; that in the name of supporting law and order it has committed many cowardly crimes, flogging and otherwise maltreating defenseless men and women. In other words, Judge Lynch, under whatever title he has assumed, has undertaken to rule a commonwealth, for which other methods of rule had been devised in a constitutional fashion.

In apparent desperation, the governor declared martial law. Whether such course was justifiable has not been determined. He thinks it was, his opponents think otherwise, and the decision will have to come from the common people; decent and well-meaning people who consider the statutes binding, and who hate a coward.

If the mobs could have been caught, unmasked, and dragged to court, and thence to jail, the process would have had full approval. If they are large enough and strong enough to defy ordinary discipline, a jab from the bayonets of the unbiased military might be good for their souls. But this is up to Governor Walton.

A noted criminologist said recently that in all his experience he had known but one instance in which a criminal had been benefited by a surgical operation on the skull. The exception was an epileptic whose condition had been bettered by the relieving of pressure of bone on his brain.

It would be an excellent thing for justice if this view were accepted by the courts. The average thug arraigned for a crime of violence, is likely to remember that as a lad he had been kicked in the head by a mule, or tumbled out of an apple tree, his wickedness dating from the time he got the cranial dent. And the honey-dripping tongue of a trick lawyer makes such a plea very impressive.

Five thousand people stormed a humble home in Detroit in a desire to see the body of a deal girl, said to have been the victim of police violence. They had to be driven away. The ordinary prompting of decency would have kept them away in the first place.

The demand is righteous. There should also be justice for that mayor, and he would be likely to find it pretty rough stuff.

Germans in Baden out of work and out of money, demanded of a printing establishment that it print the money they needed. Upon refusal they formed a plan to seize the establishment, and print their own money.

Some people seem to entertain queer notions as to what money is. The Baden radicals ought to have realized that the stuff they might turn out would be of less value than the mark, which is worth less than nothing.

Probably the most absurd campaign yarn yet is that Woodrow Wilson will be a candidate for the presidency, chiefly for the purpose of diverting votes from McAdoo, his son-in-law.

Mr. Wilson is the wasted and frail shell of a once robust man. At the obsequies of the late President Harding, in which he desired to participate, his feebleness as observed by spectators was a shock to all.

The ex-President is no more likely to enter another campaign on his own behalf than to take a course of training in aviation.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

KEEPING A PROMISE

Fred was a ready promiser. "I wish I had a fan-tail," said Peter wistfully.

"O, do you want one? I'll give you one," said Fred generously. Then he forgot all about it. Of course Peter didn't.

"I'd like to have a spool of crochet silk," said Auntie.

"I'll get you one coming home from school," said Fred. But he never thought of it again and auntie had to go for it herself.

"I'll meet you at the big rock this afternoon, Ben, and we'll both go for greens for the platform." Ben waited but Fred had forgotten all about it.

"Fred's awfully good-natured. He'll do anything for you if he doesn't forget," said his chums.

Fred's mother was troubled. This would never do. It seemed to be second nature for Fred to speak right up and promise to attend to anything and everything and then go on his way rejoicing.

"I tell you what I'd do," said grandmother. "I'd stop everything else and follow him up until he learned to take the responsibility of his word. It's worth it, Carrie. I'll help you all I can. Get right after him and don't let up until he learns that one thing." So it was agreed that mother would attend to Fred's promises and grandmother would fill in for mother.

The first promise Fred made was to his sister Betty. "Don't cry, Betts. I'll get a new head for it this afternoon after school. Haight's have 'em. I saw them in the window. What kind of hair do you want? Light or dark?"

"Light and curly, and blue eyes," said Betty brightening. "Do you really think you can?"

"Sure," said Fred brightly and mother made a note.

Fred raced home after school and tossed his books on the table. "Did you get the doll's head?" asked mother.

"Why no," said Fred cheerfully. "I forgot. Betty can get one herself though, any day. Haight has them."

"No, she won't. You promised to do it and you have to keep your word. Before you do anything else you go back to Haight's and get the doll's head."

"Can't I have anything to eat?"

"No. You keep your promise before you forget again. When you give your word it has to be kept whether you eat or not."

"Well, I'll go on my wheel and it won't take so long."

"You can't," said his mother grimly. "You promised it to Harry Tait this afternoon and he must have it."

It was quite a battle, but gradually Fred learned that his word had to be made good and he became very sparing of it. Which was as it ought to be.

MORE OF APOSTLE PAUL'S CAREER BY KEITH L. BROOKS

Continuing the account of the Apostle Paul's career Keith L. Brooks gave an exposition of Acts 24 to 26 before the Presbyterian Men's Bible class at the city council chamber Sunday morning at 9:30.

The Apostle in last Sunday's lesson was left in the hands of Roman authorities who had taken him away from infuriated Jews for his own protection and secretly conveyed him to Caesarea. A few days later Jewish leaders taking an orator named Tertullus, went to Caesarea to inform the governor against Paul. This orator's speech before Felix is a model of hot-air effusion. Tertullus seized upon the only point in the government of Felix on which he could hang any praise and then lauded the crooked Felix to the skies. There are two striking things in this story. A bad man is credited with good he never did and a good man is blamed for evil deeds of which he was innocent. Bad as Felix was, he had one spark of manhood left that made him despise all this slush he knew to be insincere and not give them the decision.

Some time later Felix, wishing to privately inquire further concerning Paul's message, went with his wife to him and Paul reasoned with them of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come. A message adapted to the slums was given in high society. Did you ever think of the moral dignity of the gospel of Christ? It does not back down for any one, however great. All are brought down to the same level and all who are saved are siners saved by grace. There is no human greatness in the presence of the gospel. Because the gospel can speak in this tone it lives forever.

Felix trembled and said: "When I have a convenient season I will send for thee." He has become a striking type of thousands. Again and again men fool themselves the same way and cheat themselves out of eternal life.

For two years Paul languished in this prison. Then another governor, Festus, came into the province, and desired to hear Paul's case reviewed. He proposed that the case be transferred to Jerusalem, but Paul kowing this to be the hot bed of Jewish religion appealed to Caesar, and Festus, therefore, had to send him to Rome. All this was bringing Paul nearer to the place he desired to go, the place where the Lord had already told him he must witness and the government must pay all his travelling expenses.

Before his departure for Rome Paul had another opportunity to witness in high society, for King Agrippa and his sister came to visit Festus and desired to hear Paul. All of the great officials of the Roman empire heard the gospel as a result of the attacks of enemies. After hearing Paul's testimony Agrippa waved it aside, saying that much learning had made Paul crazy. When men cannot prove Christianity a fake the next best thing is to call its advocates insane. Christ Himself was charged with being beside Himself. A servant is not greater than his Lord. Calling the preacher mad does not change the truth nor annul the power of the gospel. Christians are either crazy or the wisest people on earth. If they are crazy it must be said that they have unspeakable joy, unbounded peace, and unlimited hope, and every indication that heaven will be their lunatic asylum.

FOURTH SESSION COURT OF HONOR OF BOY SCOUTS

Interest in the Boy Scouts was paramount Sunday evening at the First Methodist church of Glendale. The occasion was the fourth session of the District Court of Honor. Parents and friends of the scouts were there in great numbers and everyone seemed to grasp the deep significance of the occasion.

The meeting was opened with the hymn, "America." A beautiful prayer pleading for a greater manhood through boyhood was offered by Rev. Henry I. Rasmus, Sr. The Junior Department of the church made a very pleasing contribution to the program with the two anthems, "The Earth is the Lord's" and "The Creation."

"Build for the future and as you build, build character," was the keynote of a very interesting talk by Rev. H. I. Rasmus, Jr. Rev. Rasmus' theme was "Scouting for Character."

Captain William C. Wattles, chairman District Court of Honor, presided over the meeting and personally awarded all the badges which the scouts had qualified for. Second Class badges were awarded to Scouts Gordon Wattles and Philip Solomon of Glendale, Troop No. 2; Richard Torrey and Harold Owen, Glendale Troop No. 3; and Robert Clewett, of Glendale Troop No. 1. First class badges were awarded to Scouts Robert Sturgess and Charles Warfield of Glendale Troop No. 1, and to Carter Booth of Glendale Troop No. 2.

The following merit badges were awarded by Captain Wattles: Troop No. 1, La Crescenta, Neal Darby in masonry and carpentry. Troop No. 2, Glendale, Charles Kausen in firemanship, swimming and life saving; Kenneth Solomon in bird study, first aid to animals, firemanship, public health, masonry and electricity; John Torrey in swimming, personal health and firemanship; Wilbur Booth in swimming; Robert Eastman in first aid and cycling. Troop No. 3, Glendale, Robert Ayars in scholarship; William Bogen in cycling; Gordon Bevans in cycling. Burbank Troop No. 3, William Gottsdanker in swimming, personal health and public health.

On behalf of the Glendale Rotary Club, Roy L. Kent presented to Glendale Troop No. 2 the Rotary Club banner as first prize in the second period of the troop achievement contest. This troop piled up a total of 10,966 points. Scout Executive Harold F. Benner awarded an official troop record book to Troop No. 3 Glendale for taking second place in the contest with a total of 3,474 points.

Professor Alfred Cookman made a very stirring talk on birds and their conservation. He had many specimens on hand taken from his valuable collection. Professor Cookman is the instructor of natural science at the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School. He has also been identified with the Boy Scout Movement for years. Perhaps the most striking thing in his talk was his most earnest appeal for the protection of our beautiful feathered folk. "Birds should be given protection above all other natural life," he stated. At the close of his talk he asked the Boy Scouts to stand and pledge to protect the birds and this they did to a boy.

A Star and Life Scout badge was awarded to Robert Eastman of Glendale Troop No. 2 for qualifying for ten specified merit badges. The meeting was fittingly closed by the repetition of the Scout Oath together with the "Great Scoutmaster's Prayer" and then the blowing on the bugle of Taps.

"Christ Our Ransom" Theme of Rev. Kringel

Rev. Henry O. Kringel delivered a sermon on the theme: "Christ Our Ransom," at the services of the Concordia Lutheran congregation Sunday morning. It was based on I Timothy 2-5:6. A good audience was present.

The speaker said in part: "In the faith and inner life of Christians they are not to be like unto a reed shaken in the wind, or like a hanging wall ready to fall. Our faith is to be like unto a rock which the angry sea cannot move, like a strong oak which the storm wind can neither bend nor break.. Not indeed, as though God would despise a small and little faith. Even a glimmering spark of true faith is precious in the sight of God, as the Bible saith: 'A bruised reed shall He not break, and a smoking flax shall he not quench till He send forth judgment unto victory.' But weakness of faith is not the normal condition in which it should be.

"Beginners in the faith are generally like unto weak children, their strength not exercised and developed; but we are not to remain children, we are to grow and to become men, strong in the faith and immovable.

"Now to grow in faith we must increase in the knowledge of Jesus Christ, in order that we may learn to know better in whom we believe and on what foundation our reconciliation and salvation rests. A tree derives its growth from the soil in which it roots. If the tree is to grow, the roots must spread wider and sink deeper into the soil, otherwise the tree will cease to grow and will soon begin to die. Of ourselves we can neither have faith, nor grow in it. Our faith must root in Christ, who is its author, and it will grow only as it strikes deeper root in Him. A growing tree must draw more nourishment from the soil, and so must we draw more nourishment from Christ, if our inner man is to increase in stature. We must therefore often, yea daily, occupy ourselves with Jesus Christ, must search in the Scriptures and meditate on the Word of the Cross, considering what He is, what He has done for us, how He saves us and how sure and certain His salvation is. We must become more intimately acquainted with Christ Our Ransom, then only can we grow in Him.

"Who is this ransom? There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."

"What was the necessity of this ransom? God was in no way bound to make peace with man, according to right and justice He might have banished the whole race from His countenance forever, but He had no pleasure in the death of sinners and therefore resolved to become His own peace-maker. Therefore, God the Son partook of humanity that He might act as mediator, whereof St. Paul says: 'It pleased the Father that in Him all fullness dwell; and having made peace through the blood of His cross to reconcile all things unto Himself.' Jesus Christ, the God-man, is the mediator between God and man.

Behold, ye lovers of the Lord, what this meant. It meant that the Son of God had to suffer and die for us. His suffering and death does not mean that He was a sinner; it does not mean that He was overpowered by His enemies. It means far more, something far greater. In His suffering and in His death He was paying the wages of the world's sin. He became our ransom, that believing in Him we might not perish but have everlasting life."

"A BEAUTIFUL OLD AGE" SUBJECT OF REV. EDMONDS

A most impressive "Old Folks Service" was held in the Glendale Presbyterian church yesterday morning. Mrs. Mary Phillips, aged 86, was the oldest lady present and she was presented with a beautiful basket of flowers. H. C. Brown, aged 91, of 607 North Geneva street, was the oldest man present. The sermon subject was "A Beautiful Old Age" and the text was from Ps. 92:14. "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age." Literature is full of songs and happy sayings about the beauty of childhood and youth. But old age has not many songs save those that are set in the minor key. The wise man tells of the decay of the earthly house of man's physical pride and glory. Hence it is well for every man in his prime to remember that that which is now strong in its maturity must soon fade away and die as old age approaches.

God certainly has blundered in planning the cycle of man's life unless He has made it possible for the aged man or woman to be beautiful and attractive at the sunset epoch of human life. Since it is unthinkable that the all-wise Creator and Ruler has blundered we are forced to believe that not enough recognition has been given to the value and beauty of old age.

A courageous old age is always inspiring. It is a sad sight when old folks lose their courage. In his 85th year Caleb asked for the mountains peopled with giants dwelling in walled cities which must be battered down before his reward could be enjoyed. The world has a large place for the aged man or woman who knows the meaning of true Christian courage.

Another beautiful flower which blossoms in the garden of old age is unselfishness. It "seeks not her own." This fine trait is manifest in the life of Abraham in his dealings with his nephew Lot. No wonder he is called the "friend of God."

The saddest sight in the world is old age with no Christ. Christ and old age is a priceless possession. Your aged parents may not have left you much in the world's good, nevertheless if you were left a Christian example, you are richer than the richest.

Memory had a large part in making possible a happy old age. The memory of hard and trying experiences, now many years gone, have through the years been smoothed and polished with the memory that all things work together for good to those who love God. The storms do pass by, the sting is taken away, and the memory that he has promised to be with us all the days, event unto the end, is sufficient reason for happiness and beauty in the soul even though the body be bent and torn through sickness, sorrow and disease. "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow—I will fear no evil."

The crowning virtue of old age is love. The devil has no happy old folks. Love never fails and it is never more beautiful than when it adorns the aged saint of God. Love is the robe of righteousness. Love is the star in the crown of rejoicing. Love is the key that unlocks the gate of heaven. Love is its own reward. "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age." "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteouness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

Editorials by the People

Editor, Glendale Daily Press,
Dear Sir:

In your issue of Sept. 19, '23, page 2, column 1, appears an article under the heading, "They all come back sometime or other." In view of some of the statements in said article, those headlines are certainly pregnant with twin meanings. Not only do they mean that those who are foolish and short-sighted enough to leave Glendale in the vain hope of finding a better and more beautiful place to live are doomed to realize the error of their ways and return to the beauty and superior virtues of our wonderful city, but they also mean that those who are foolish and short-sighted enough to attempt to build a permanent and enviable reputation for themselves upon error or falsehood at the expense of others are as surely doomed to realize the error of their way and find it wiser and better to return to the beautiful and superior virtues of truth.

In the article referred to Frank Chase, the returned prodigal, who like the foolish virgin of Holy Writ failed to "keep his lamp trimmed and burning" on the inviting altar of Glendale, is given, or claims the honor of being the founder of the Glendale Union High School Explosion in these words:

"When Frank Chase, founder of the Glendale Weekly Press in 1910, of the G. U. H. S. Explosion and the Tujunga Weekly a little later, shook the dust of Glendale from his 14's, etc. - * - Frank says when he first printed the Explosion it was a 2-column, 4-page pamphlet. He was surprised when shown this week's splendid issue, a regular newspaper in size and contents. * * * "

"Indeed the history of Glendale cannot be truthfully written without the name of Kenneth Beldin, for he was one of the two boys who stood beside the guns on the firing line in the battle for municipal ownership of water until the finished contest told that the victory was won. In the beginning of his graduation year Kenneth became ambitious to start a high school paper, but the authorities in charge would not permit him to do so, fearing that it would become a financial burden on the school. His ambition would not down, however, and finally when he obtained permission to start the paper as a private enterprise he became so elated that a friend warned him not to "explode." "Thanks," said Kenneth, "that is a good name for my paper, I will call it the Explosion." So firmly did he set the enterprise on its feet with a cash present of the $12.00 original cash capital of $12.00 and a good reserve fund of energy and ability, that at the end of the term his cash balance showed $50.00 net profit, severel hundred dollars' worth of experience and the honor of being the founder and first editor of the G. U. H. S. Explosion. When he left high school for college he made the student body a graduating capital and entire paper which had already taken its place as a part of the institution and has continued a factor in the wonderful growth of the G. U. H. S."

What more need be said? The wise will build their permanent homes amid the voluptuous beauties and superior virtues of our wonderful city, and the wise will build their permanent reputations on the beautiful and superior virtues of truth and justice to others.

Respectfully,
J. C. BELDIN.

THE DEW IN THE CLOVER

Oh for a roll in the purple clover
When it's all asparkle with dew.
The song of the thrush in the hedgerow
Is calling to me and you.
The floor of the valley is golden
With beams from the morning sun,
So jump right into your bathing suit—
Let's get out and have some fun!

A roll in the purple clover
When it's heavy with morning dew,
With the bright sun shining o'er,
Means health and beauty for you.
Your wrinkles like magic will vanish;
Your cheek wear the glow of the rose;
Your rouge pot and rag you will banish;
You'll scarce need to powder your nose!

Your skin will glisten like satin
And your eyes will grow brighter, too,
If you bathe in the sweet purple clover
When it sparkles with morning dew.
I love a trip to the beaches,
And a dip in the briny, too,
But I'd much rather go where the sweet clover grows
And bathe in the health-giving dew.

So, a word to the wise and the otherwise
And cultivate the habit of dew.
You'll find yourself better, in every way,
And you'll know what I've told you is true.

—P. FELTON.

TIGERS AT LAST WIN TWO GAMES FROM PORTLAND

Bees Twice Sting Angels, Seals Beat Sacs, Oaks Split With Suds

At times the impossible will happen, Vernon took both games of the doubleheader from Portland yesterday, 4 to 3, and 6 to 1. It seems that the Tigers are just waking up from a long, long nap. Schellenback heaved the first game for Vernon, and was opposed by Eckert. In the second encounter Carson was on the mound for the Tigers, with Yarrison heaving for Portland.

The first game was devoid of any special thrills — just plain every day baseball, in spite of the fact that Vernon was playing. The Ducks must have reconciled themselves to playing with the cellar champs, and gone to sleep, while the Tigers took advantage of the fact. Vernon came from behind in the second frame of the second encounter and scored five runs. The score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Portland	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	— 3
Base hits	0	3	1	1	1	0	2	3	2	—13

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 24.—Coast League baseball ended in Salt Lake yesterday with two victories for the Bees. They won the first game, 5 to 4, and the second, 15 to 5. The first game went to the Bees in the ninth when Golvin threw the ball away. The Bees rapped Wallace and Hanna for fifteen hits in the six innings of the second game which were played, the game being called on account of rain. Wally Hood hit three homers in the second game, one in each of his times at bat. The Bees won the series, five games to three.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 24.—San Francisco made it six in a row by winning over Sacramento by a score of 8 to 7 yesterday. More than 11,000 fans, including excursionists from San Francisco and Northern California, saw the Seals and Solons battle through to a twelve-inning, 6 to 6, tie at Moreing field in the afternoon at which time Umpire Ward called the game on account of darkness.

OAKLAND, Sept. 24. — Seattle and Oakland split a double-header yesterday, the Indians winning the morning game, 4 to 0, and Oakland the afternoon game, 9 to 2. It was the final series for the Oaks on their home grounds.

GRID PROSPECTS BRIGHTER AT POMONA

Sagehens Do Not Look So Bad After All; First Game Oct. 6

Football prospects out at Pomona college are not as dull as pre-season dopesters would have it believed. With only three lettermen back on the job, it looked like the Sagehens were going to have a hard season of it, but now that practice has opened things do not look so bad.

In the first place Capt. Mooney who broke his leg in baseball last spring and doubted if he could play at all this season, after a thorough X-ray examination by his physician, announces that he will be able to play in at least a majority of the games. Mooney is one of the three lettermen back from last year's championship squad. The others, "Champ" Clark at half, and Baynham at tackle, are both on hand and look better than ever.

Nixson's backfield will have two other men who are experienced and undoubtedly as good as last year's stars. "Borey" Bell, a transfer last year from Nevada and the captain and mainstay of the Pomona freshman squad in his initial year, is slated to deliver the goods at fullback. His toe work will also mean much to the Sagehens.

"Fuzzy" Merritt, star of last season's freshman squad, and rated among the best signal callers of the West, will fill the vacancy left by Ray Wilson. Others who look good in the backfield are Stone and Eaton from last year's subs, and Goodson and McCully from the frosh.

On the line, Heath is going to have quite a job. At ends, Vernon and Stafford look good. Vernon took his share of the glory last season as a substitute and this year he is heavier and faster. Stafford did stellar work on the freshman team. Another likely prospect is Cowan, a transfer from Chaffee Junior college. He is speedy and handles himself like a born end.

At tackles, Baynham is one sure man and the rest will largely be up to Carter, who played some on the varsity last season, and to Collins and Lang. Al Tarr, a transfer of some 200 pounds from San Diego Junior college, is out for guard and shows up well. Roblee, Thompson, Scott and Carey are among the other likelies.

The first game will come on October 6 with U. S. C. at the dedication of the new Coliseum. Pomona hopes to show the Trojans a real fight.

Ruth Picked the Right Bat

—By Ripley

By ROBERT L. RIPLEY

Babe Ruth has made his choice and he is sticking to it.

When the Bambino finished the 1922 World Series in a blaze of ignominity he promised faithfuly to mend his ways the forthcoming year.

He chose to work hard and behave himself.

You all know the answer.

Ruth has played the greatest game of his life in every way. No better all-around performance has been seen since Cobb was in his prime ten years ago.

Babe reported in excellent conditiontion at the start of the season and has kept himself that way all year. He has been hitting around .400 and has nearly forty homeruns (he would have more if the pitchers had given him a chance). The season's close may find him leading both leagues in both batting and home runs.

Ruth will undoubtedly receive the award for the most valuable player in the American League.

WARNING FOR AUTO CAMPERS

The motor camper is today in great favor along the road. The people of the rural districts welcome him. But, the continuation of such a welcome depends upon his return of the courtesies extended. If the motor camper is to allow even a few of his tribe to leave a trail of rubbish, tin cans, papers, polluted waters, and tainted air behind them, he is going to find this welcome waning fast.

ATHLETIC CLUB DOWNS CUBS, TUNE, 5-3

Morgan Pitches Great Game for Locals, Harris Is Sensational

Defeating the fast Washington Cubs to the tune of 5 to 3, the Glendale Athletic Club baseball team yesterday played the most spectacular contest of its season. The game was played at the athletic field in Happiland Park, Verdugo Woodlands.

Tommy Morgan, hurler for the locals, pitched a great game. He struck out the first seven men to face him, and causing a riot of joy among the local rooters. At the end of the seventh inning the visitors had obtained but one run and three hits off Tommy. Manager Brice sent in a new battery in the eighth inning. Bob Bradbury pitching and C. Schribder catching. Bradbury allowed two runs, but soon settled down to his regular style, striking out three Cubs in the ninth.

Slim Harris, centerfielder for the Athletics, made a sensational catch early in the game, jumping nearly a foot in the air to reach the ball. The score:

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24.—Manager Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Indians and George Uhle, the Indians' pitching ace, are among several players of the American League who will participate in exhibition games at Peterboro, Canada, October 10, 11 and 12. The proceeds of the games will be turned over to a fund for the benefit of returned Canadian soldiers.

SPORT-O-GRAMS

(By Francis Wilkerson Read)

SOUTHLAND HAS GREAT FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

Southern California will be treated to a wonderful football season this year. Numerous games, all of them promising to be first class contests, will be staged hereabouts. The Southern California Conference, composed of all the local colleges except the University of Southern California, will open its schedule October 13. All these games will be played in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles.

The first big game of the season will come on October 19, when the Stanford Cardinals come south to meet Occidental. This is not a conference game, but is staged annually. The contest will be played at the huge Los Angeles Coliseum, marking the opening of that huge bowl as far as football is concerned. Occidental should make a good showing against the Stanford gridders, and might even surprise the Cards and cop the game.

On November 10 Andy Smith's Golden Bears will come down from Berkeley to take on the U. S. C. Trojans. This promises to be the game of the year. Last year the Trojans held California to a 12-0 score, and gave the Bruins a fight for their money. It is rumored in many places that California will not be so strong this fall, and that U. S. C. will cop the game. This encounter will also be staged in the Exposition Park bowl.

On New Year's Day two teams, as yet unknown, will meet at Pasadena to decide the matter of football supremacy of the nation. For several years this has been a classic. Last year, because of the refusal of California, the logical representative of the west to play, the contest lacked its usual interest. It is hoped that this year it will resume its reputation as a real football classic.

ENOUGH FIGHTING

One eastern sporting critic has said that New York has had enough fights for this season, and that promoters would do well to wait a while before staging any more title bouts. So say we all. This has been an exceptionally active year in the ring sport. Two heavyweight championship bouts, another of almost an equal amount of interest, and championship fights in all the other classes of boxing. That is quite a program for one season. But now that these bouts are completed, the public is desirous of a little rest, a change from the fighting game. Football is approaching. Already are the college teams on the field, preparing for the coming season. Then baseball is still with us—the World's Series is only a few weeks off, and the fans will turn their attention once more to the National pastime—and to New York. There are enough sporting events on the calendar for a while without any more fights. The fans have had enough fighting—for the present. Next season they will be ready for more, but just now they are preparing to be occupied with the World's Series and the coming gridiron season.

UMPIRES

Sacramento was the scene of a small sized riot a few days ago. It was all because of an umpire, or rather, a pair of umpires. Byron and Johnson, who were the arbiters at the game between Sacramento and San Francisco, are cordially disliked in the capital city. They have earned a bad reputation up there, and have not gained the favor of the fans. On several occasions the citizens of Sacramento have told them just what they were. When a close decision went against the home team, the indignant population rose in a riot and assulted the unfortunate umps—Byron in particular, for it was he who had made the decision. After the game he had to be escorted to safety by members of the teams—else he would have been utterly at the mercy of the crowd of rabid fans. President McCarthy of the Coast League had been warned not to send Byron and Johnson to Sacramento, because of the attitude of the fans at that city toward them. He insisted upon doing so. After the riot he was advised by the mayor of Sacramento to send substitutes to umpire "for the good of the game." This he also refused to do. When this situation occurs, it is difficult to blame the fans. Their team had been discriminated against right along—they thought—by these two umpires. McCarthy insisted upon sending them there in spite of all that he knew about the situation—and refused to recall them when the riot took place. Is the blame entirely with the fans in a case of this kind?

TIGER GRIDDERS ARE ROUNDING INTO SHAPE

With ten lettermen back on the job, and a flock of experienced material to boot, Coach Joe Pipal of Occidental is working for all he is worth to produce a championship eleven for the Tiger institution this year. His chances for success are more than bright, as the Oxy lads are considered at the present time to be the strongest team in the Southern California Conference.

Preliminary practice has been going on during the week, and before many more days the Tigers will be getting down to brass tacks, speaking in terms of hardware. For the past few seasons Occidental has played in hard luck, but it looks as though the Tigers would come back into their old glory this year, or at least make a mighty strong play for the laurels. Pipal is recognized as a great coach, and should produce a real football team with the material he has on hand.

According to present plans the Tigers will play their first game of the season one week from today, arrangements being under way to send Occidental against the U. S. S. Arizona eleven, now stationed at Los Angeles harbor. Occidental will open the Conference season October 13 against Redlands at Patterson Field.

CALIFORNIA IN VICTORY OVER ALUMNI SQUAD

By defeating the Cal Alumni eleven by a score of 3-0, the Golden Bears proved that they are not a minus quantity, as some believe. The game was played Saturday at Berkeley, and, while devoid of any thrills, was an interesting contest. The score came in the second quarter, when the Bruins put over a beautiful place kick. The Alumni never threatened to become dangerous until the last of the game, and then the Blue and Gold stopped them before they did any damage. The Alumni game was the first on the Cal schedule, and was looked on by many as a critical game for the Bruins. But they emerged winners, and are one game to the good toward an undefeated season.

A NARROW-MINDED REFORM

The entire anti-pistol agitation seems based upon an extremely narrow-minded deduction, namely, pistols kill people—take away the pistols, no more killing. Any view point which does not permit of further vision than that is narrow-cast of the narrow. It is up to men of vision to take an interest in the immediate and decisive defeat of this propaganda.

AQUATIC MEET TO BE HELD AT THE AMBASSADOR POOL

Entries for the aquatic carnival to be staged next Wednesday night by the Ambassador Swimming club in the hotel plunge have closed with over 40 of the foremost stars on the Pacific coast listed, it was announced today by Coach Frank Holborow.

Twelve events will compose the program. One of the features will be a race for women at 75 yards, free style. Helen Vernon, Thelma Finn, Olive Hatch, Marie Curtis and Alice Reman are entered.

Fancy spring-board diving will be on exhibition when Janet Ford, Viola Hartman, Carol Fletcher and Harriet Neilson compete from a 10-foot height. Duke Kahanamoku and Buddy Smith are some of the other stars who will take part in the carnival, while Merritt Leach will perform a handcuffed dive.

TENNIS TOURNEY NEARS FINAL MATCHES

As the Community Service Tennis Tournament nears the final rounds, interest in growing keener each day. But six contestants are left in the running at the present time, the others having been eliminated. Completion of the closing matches will be accomplished as soon as possible, according to Director Tucker of the Community Service.

By defeating Hibbard to the tune of 2-6, 6-1, 6-4, Riley earns the right to meet the winner of the next round. Stillwell defeated Davidson, 6-1, 6-0, while Fuller beat Bode.

As the line up now stands, Stillwell and Urick will meet in what promises to be a real hot encounter, while Baker will play the winner of the match. The winner of this game will place in the semi-finals. Windrum and Fuller are matched for an encounter, the winner meeting Riley. The winner of this match will go against the victor in the first mentioned schedule in the final contest of the tourney.

Although play has been a little slow, much interest has been shown in the tournament, states Mr. Tucker. As soon as the present schedule is completed a second tournament will be started, with sections for men and women, and trophies for each section. Plans are already being formed for this tournament, and all tennis players are asked to communicate with Mr. Tucker at the Chamber of Commerce, in order that they may be listed as participants in the tourney.

Coffee stains on a cloth or on any material are most difficult to eradicate unless treated immediately. Boiling water will remove them if the coffee has not had time to be thoroughly absorbed by the fiber of the material. But if the stain is of long standing, equal parts of yolk of egg and glycerine applied to the spot and allowed to dry on is practically the only method of removing them.

TRILBY

By GEORGE DU MAURIER

This famous novel is given in serial form to readers of this newspaper through arrangement with Richard Walton Tully, producer of the screen version, and First National Pictures, Inc., distributor of the motion picture.

Copyright 1894 by Harper & Bros.

PART FIRST

It was a fine, sunny, showery day in April.

The big studio window was open at the top, and let in a pleasant breeze from the northwest. Things were beginning to look shipshape at last. The big piano, a semi-grand by Broadwood, had arrived from England by "the Little Quickness" (la Petite Vitesse as the goods trains are called in France), and lay, freshly tuned, alongside the eastern wall; on the wall opposite was a panoply of foils, masks, and boxing-gloves.

A trapeze, a knotted rope, and two parallel cords, supporting each a ring, depended from a huge beam in the ceiling. The walls were of the usual dull red, relieved by plaster casts of arms and legs and hands and feet; and Dante's mask, and Michael Angelo's altorilievo of Leda and the swan, and a centaur and Lapith from the Elgin marbles—on none of these had the dust as yet had time to settle.

There were also studies in oil from the nude; copies of Titian, Rembrandt, Velasquez, Rubens, Tintoret, Leonardo da Vinci—none of the school of Botticelli, Mantegna, and Co.—a firm whose merits had not as yet been revealed to the many.

And an immense divan spread itself in width and length and delightful thickness just beneath the big north window, the business window—a divan so immense that three well-fed, well-contented Englishmen could all lie lazily smoking their pipes on it at once without being in each other's way, and very often did!

At present one of these Englishmen—a Yorkshireman, by-the-way, called Taffy (and also the Man of Blood, because he was supposed to be distantly related to a baronet)—was more energetically engaged. Bare-armed, and in his shirt and trousers, he was twirling a pair of Indian clubs round his head. His face was flushed, and he was perspiring freely and looked fierce. He was a very big young man, fair, with kind but choleric blue eyes, and the muscles of his brawny arm were strong as iron bands.

For three years he had borne her Majesty's commission, and had been through the Crimean campaign.

He was good looking, with straight features; but I regret to say that, besides his heavy plunger's mustache, he wore an immense pair of drooping auburn whiskers, of the kind that used to be called Piccadilly weepers, and were afterwards affected by Mr. Sothern in Lord Dundreary. It was a fashion to do so then for such of our gilded youth as could afford the time (and the hair); the bigger and fairer the whiskers, the more beautiful was thought the youth!

Another inmate of this blissful abode—Sandy, the Laird of Cockpen, as he was called—sat in similarly simple attire at his easel, painting at a lifelike little picture of a Spanish toreador serenading a lady of high degree (ir broad daylight). He had never been to Spain, but he had a complete toreador's kit—a bargain which he had picked up for a mere song in the Boulevard du Temple—and he had hired the guitar. His pipe was in his mouth—reversed; for it had gone out, and the ashes were spilled all over his trousers, where holes were often burned in this way.

He also had entered life by another door. His parents (good, pious people in Dundee) had intended that he should be a solicitor, as his father and grandfather had been before him. And here he was in Paris famous, painting toreadors, and spouting the "Ballad of the Bouillabaisse," as he would often do out of sheer lightness of heart—much oftener, indeed, than he would say his prayers.

Kneeling on the divan, with his elbow on the window-sill, was a third and much younger youth. The third he was "Little Billee." He had pulled down the green baize blind, and was looking over the roofs and chimney-pots of Paris and all about with all his eyes, munching the while a roll and a savory saveloy, in which there was evidence of much garlic. He ate with great relish, for he was very hungry; he had been all the morning at Carrel's studio, drawing from the life.

Little Billee was small and slender, about twenty or twenty-one, and had a straight white forehead veined with blue, large dark-blue eyes, delicate, regular features, and coal-black hair. He was also very graceful and well built, with very small hands and feet, and much better dressed than his friends, who went out of their way to outdo the denizens of the quartier latin in careless eccentricity of garb, and succeeded.

As Little Billee munched he also gazed at the busy place below—the Place St. Anatole des Arts—at the old houses opposite, some of which were being pulled down, no doubt lest they should fall of their own sweet will. In the gaps between he would see discolored, old, cracked, dingy walls, with mysteriouss windows and rusty iron balconies of great antiquity—sights that set him dreaming dreams of mediaeval French love and wickedness and crime, bygone mysteries of Paris!

One gap went right through the block, and gave him a glimpse of the river, the "Cite," and the ominous old Morgue; a little to the right rose the gray towers of Notre Dame de Paris into the checkered April sky. Indeed, the top of nearly all Paris lay before him, with a little stretch of the imagination on his part; and he gazed with a sense of novelty, an interest and a pleasure for which he could not have found any expression in mere language.

Paris! Paris!! Paris!!!

The very name had always been one to conjure with, whether he thought of it as a mere sound on the lips and in the ear, or as a magical written or printed word for the eye. And here was the thing itself at last, and he, he himself, ipsissimus, in the very midst of it, to live there and learn there as long as he liked, and make himself the great artist he longed to be.

A strange figure appeared, framed by the gloom of the antechamber.

(Andree Lafayette as Trilby)

Then, his meal finished, he lit a pipe, and flung himself on the divan and sighed deeply, out of the overfull contentment of his heart.

He felt he had never known happiness like this, never even dreamed its possibility. And yet his life had been a happy one. He was young and tender, was Little Billee; he had never been to any school, and was innocent of the world and its wicked ways; innocent of French especially, and the ways of Paris and its Latin quarter. He had been brought up and educated at home, had spent his boyhood in London with his mother and sister, who now lived in Devonshire on somewhat straitened means. His father, who was dead, had been a clerk in the Treasury.

He and his two friends, Taffy and the Laird, had taken this studio together. The Laird slept there, in a small bedroom off the studio. Taffy had a bedroom at the Hotel de Seine, in the street of that name. Little Billee lodged at the Hotel Corneille, in the Place de l'Odeon.

He looked at his two friends, and wondered if any one, living or dead, had ever had such a glorious pair of chums as these.

So Taffy and the Laird loved Little Billee—loved him very much indeed. Not but what Little Billee had his faults. For instance, he didn't interest himself very warmly in other people's pictures. He didn't seem to care for the Laird's guitar-playing toreador, nor for his serenaded lady—at all events, he never said anything about them, either in praise or blame. He looked at Taffy's realisms (for Taffy was a realist) in silence, and nothing tries true friendship so much as silence of this kind.

But, then, to make up for it, when they all three went to the Louvre, he didn't seem to trouble much about Titian either, or Rembrandt, or Velasquez, Rubens, Veronese or Leonardo. He looked at the people who looked at the pictures, instead of at the pictures themselves; especially at the people who copied them, the sometimes charming young lady painters—and these seemed to him even more charming than they really were—and he looked a great deal out of the Louvre windows.

Little Billie speculated on the future of himself and his friends, when he should have got to forty years—an almost impossibly remote future.

These speculations were interrupted by a loud knock at the door, and two men came in.

First, a tall, bony individual of any age between thirty and forty-five, of Jewish aspect, well-featured but sinister. He was very shabby and dirty, and wore a red beret and a large velveteen cloak, with a big metal clasp at the collar. His thick, heavy, languid lusterless black hair fell down behind his ears on to his shoulders, in that musicianlike way that is so offensive to the normal Englishman. He had bold, brilliant black eyes, with long, heavy lids, a thin, sallow face, and a beard of burned-up black which grew almost from his under eyelids; and over it his mustache, a shade lighter, fell in two long spiral twists. He went by the name of Svengali, and spoke fluent French with a German accent, and humorous German twists and idioms, and his voice was very thin and mean and harsh, and often broke into a disagreeable falsetto.

His companion was a little swarthy young man—a gypsy, possibly—much pitted with the smallpox, and also very shabby. He had large, soft, affectionate brown eyes, like a King Charles spaniel. He had small, nervous, veiny hands, with nails bitten down to the quick, and carried a fiddle and a fiddlestick under his arm, without a case, as though he had been playing in the street.

"Ponchour, mes enfants," said Svengali. "Che vous amene mon ami Checko, qui choue du fiolon gomme un anche!"

Little Billee, who adored all "sweet musicianers," jumped up and made Gecko as warmly welcome as he could in his early French.

"Ha! le biano!" exclaimed Svengali, flinging his red beret on it, and his cloak on the ground. "Ch'espere qu'il est pon, et pien t'accord!"

And, sitting down on the music-stool, he ran up and down the scales with that easy power, that smooth, even crispness of touch, which reveal the master.

Then he fell to playing Chopin's impromptu in A flat, so beautifully that Little Billee's heart went nigh to bursting with suppressed emotion and delight.

He never forgot that impromptu, which he was destined to hear again one day in strange circumstances.

Then Svengali and Gecko made music together, divinely. Little fragmentary things, sometimes consisting but of a few bars, but these bars of such beauty and meaning! Scraps, snatches, short melodies, meant to fetch, to charm immediately, or to melt or sadden or madden just for a moment, and that knew just when to leave off—czardas, gypsy dances, Hungarian love-plaints, things little known out of eastern Europe in the fifties of this century, till the Laird and Taffy were almost as wild in their enthusiasm as Little Billee—a silent enthusiasm too deep for speech. And when these two great artists left off to smoke, the three Britishers were too much moved even for that, and there was a stillness. . . .

Suddenly there came a loud knuckle-rapping at the outer door, and a portentous voice of great volume, and that might almost have belonged to any sex (even an angel's), uttered the British milkman's yodel, "Milk below!" and before any one could say "Entrez," a strange figure appeared, framed by the gloom of the little antechamber.

It was the figure of a very tall and fully developed young female, clad in the gray overcoat of a French infantry soldier, continued netherwards by a short striped petticoat, beneath which were visible her bare white ankles and insteps, and slim, straight, rosy heels, clean cut and smooth as the back of a razor; her toes lost themselves in a huge pair of male list slippers, which made her drag her feet as she walked.

She bore herself with easy, unembarrassed grace, like a person whose nerves and muscles are well in tune, whose spirits are high, who has lived much in the atmosphere of French studios, and feels at home in it.

This strange medley of garments was surmounted by a small bare head with short, thick, wavy brown hair, and a very healthy young face, which could scarcely be called quite beautiful at first sight, since the eyes were too wide apart, the mouth too large, the chin too massive, the complexion a mass of freckles. Besides, you can never tell how beautiful (or how ugly) a face may be till you have tried to draw it.

But a small portion of her neck, down by the collarbone, which just showed itself between the unbuttoned lapels of her military coat collar, was of a delicate privetlike whiteness that is never to be found on any French neck, and very few English ones. Also, she had a very fine brow, broad and low, with thick level eyebrows much darker than her hair, a broad, bony, high bridge to her short nose, and her full, broad cheeks were beautifully modeled. She would have made a singularly handsome boy.

TODAY AND TOMORROW!

James Cruze's Latest Paramount Success, featuring Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson, Edward Horton, Fritzi Ridgeway, Louise Dresser and Charles Ogle:

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP"

By Harry Leon Wilson, the author of "Merton of the Movies." An established classic of American humor. You'll roar at Ernest Torrence (hit of "The Covered Wagon) as "Cousin Egbert," and Edward Horton as "Ruggles." James Cruze, producer of "The Covered Wagon" and "Hollywood," proves again he is the greatest director of comedy on the screen today.

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP" IS FEATURE AT T. D. & L. TODAY

"Rotten shift, life is," now murmured the Honorable George quite as if he had forgotten me. "If I'd have but put through that Monte Carlo affair I dare say I'd have chucked the whole business—gone to South Africa, perhaps, and set up a mine or a plantation. Shouldn't have come back. Just cut off, and good-bye to this mess. But no capital. Can't do things without capital. Where these American Johnnies have the pull of us. Do anything. Nearly do what they jolly well like to. No sense to money. Stuff that runs blind. Look at the silly beggars that have it—" On he went quite alarmingly with his tirade. Almost as violent he was as an ugly-headed chap I once heard ranting when I went with my brother-in-law to a meeting of the North Brixton Radical Club. Quite like an anarchist he was. Presently he quieted. After a long pull as his pipe he regarded me with an entire change of manner. Well I knew something was coming; coming swift as a rocketing woodcock. Word for word I put down our incredible speeches:

"You are going out to America, Ruggles."

"Yes, sir; North or South, sir?"

"North, I fancy; somewhere on the west coast—Ohio, Omaha, one of those Indian places."

Perhaps Indiana or the Yellowstone Valley, sir?"

"The chap's a sort of millionaire."

"Ruggles of Red Gap" which the above gives an idea of is the wonderful feature film now on at the T., D. & L. theater.

JACKIE COOGAN LEAPS FOR LIFE IN 'CIRCUS DAYS'

Jackie Coogan does a "leap for life," which described as one of the most amusing stunts ever filmed, in his new starring vehicle," Circus Days," which is the attraction again today at the Gateway Theater.

As Toby Tyler, living with his widowed mother on the farm of a mean-tempered uncle, he gets up a circus of his own with two cousins.

Toby mounts one end of a see-saw, then the two boys jump on the other. The result is that Toby is catapulted clear over the top of a haystack, landing on the back of the cow, which his crabby old uncle is milking.

The cow upsets the farmer and the milkpail, and when Toby finally reaches the ground he takes to his heels.

This catastrophe brings about a situation which results in. Toby running away and joining a real circus, in which, after many adventures, he finally covers himself with glory.

The Gateway has established a free auto park, well lighted, on the lot adjoining the theater. It is in charge of a uniformed attendant.

TOM JENKINS, 113 YEARS OLD, FILM FEATURE

Working the members of his company in southwestern Louisiana in filming his newest photoplay production, "The White Rose," D. W. Griffith engaged considerable local talent to augment his scenes.

Among the applicants was Uncle Tom Jenkins, an old ex-slave on the J. B. Le Vert estate at St. John. Authentic records in the court house at St. Martinsville, La., prove conclusively that Jenkins is 113 years old. Mr. Griffith had need of just such a type and was glad to use the aged negro's services in a number of scenes. The strain of repeated walkings and movements before motion picture cameras did not seem to annoy the old man. He enjoyed every minute of his work and will be one of the many in the section who will eagerly await the first public showings of "The White Rose," a United Artists release which is showing at the Glendale Theater again today.

Jenkins is half Indian and half negro. He lives in an ancient cabin on the Le Vert estate, and proudly points out the great, towering rows of pine trees that form an arched driveway up to the house as being planted by him before the Civil War.

Strips of leather and gros grain ribbon interwoven form a sports hat which is unique as well as becoming. A cockade of ribbon at the side adds a smart touch.
